

Case Studies & School Stories

'The actions of one person [a student] formed the basis of what we do today.

It isn't hard if you want to.'

Rob Carthew, Unley High School
Maths and SOSE teacher

Start small and do it well.
That's how we work.

On litter and recycling:

'There used to be bottles everywhere, now all students have the opportunity to do little things and make a big difference.'

Wipe out Waste

This section provides information about what some school communities are doing in relation to waste management, resource recovery and learning about waste. Information has been gathered from schools with a variety of waste reduction initiatives. Stories from sites that have just begun waste reduction initiatives are just as valuable as stories from schools with long-running, successful initiatives / programs.

Remember: the 'what not to do' stories are as valuable as the success stories!

We understand that schools may not wish to publicise the difficulties and failures that can and do occur. However, this section is intended to provide hints on barriers you might expect to face, and experiences of downright disasters!

Schools can provide this information and remain anonymous.

We know there are many schools with waste reduction initiatives. Please send us your stories (from staff, students and parents) and pictures (jpg format 300 dpi) for inclusion on the WOW website or in printed resources. We will seek your permission before including them and respect any requests for anonymity.

We look forward to this section growing and hope that you will check the WOW website for updates.
